

Geographic Information Support Team Terms of Reference

The Geographic Information Support Team (GIST) is a group of technical experts comprised of geographic information focal points from UN and donor agencies with disaster management and humanitarian assistance mandates. It seeks to enhance the use of geographic information to improve emergency preparedness and response by:

- 1) providing a forum for geographic and geo-referenced information and data exchange amongst humanitarian response agencies and donors,
- 2) promoting the use of geo-referencing to enhance data and information coordination to improve humanitarian response, and
- 3) identifying specialized resources and geographic information available/required to enhance support for potential and ongoing emergency operations
